

A Poem

Red Breasted Robin

Red breasted robin how proudly you sing,
A sweet harmony of the season you bring.
Treetop to treetop you playfully roam,
Onward you'll fly to your destined home.

Red breasted robin you are a welcomed sight,
Gathering together from morning till night.
Soon it's time to continue your journey,
Stay a little longer don't be in a hurry.

Red breasted robin we bid you farewell,
Soaring to blue skies where you usually dwell.
Until this time again next year,
We await again your song of good cheer.

*Lora Rozkowski
2015*

